What is the CALL Public Archives?

- A collection of Army-related articles, theses, monographs, papers, historical documents, and other resources that are unclassified and releasable to and available to the general public without restriction.
- A structured, hierarchical repository that is patterned after an office filing system, including file rooms, file cabinets, file drawers, file folders, and documents.
- A repository that can be searched either by drilling down through levels of hierarchy or by submitting queries, using a powerful search and retrieval software (Convera RetrievalWare).
- A product and responsibility of the Research Division of the Center for Army Lessons Learned, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.
- Formerly called the “CALL Public Database”.

Note: This is the first of 4 Buttons.

What do I do now?

Option #1: Drill down to browse the contents of Filerooms

When should I drill down?

- When you are unfamiliar with and have the time to browse the contents of a fileroom.
- When you know where to find a particular file (e.g. a specific Military Review article).

Recommendation: The query should be your principal means of finding documents, not drilling down.

- Allows for use of Boolean operators (and, or, not) and proximity operators.
- Best quick search when you want a limited number of hits.

Pattern

- A search that looks not only for the exact words in your clue, but also other words that looks something like those words.
- Best search when you are not sure of the spelling of a word or if you are searching against text read by Optical Character Recognition (OCR). The Public Archives contain much OCR text.
- Produces many more hits than a Boolean Search, but ranks hits by several criteria.
- Slower than a Boolean search.

Concept (the default)

- A semantic or meanings search.
- Searches not only for the exact words in your clue, but also other words that have similar meanings.
- Slower than a Boolean search.
- Best search for ranking and putting best hits at the top of your results list.

Pg 1-HURRICANE
iii
ABSTRACT
HURRICANE RELIEF OPERATIONS IN THE CARIBBEAN: IS THE USE OF THE MILITARY IN HURRICANE RELIEF OPERATIONS APPROPRIATE, by Lt. Col George N. Robinson, 82 Pages.
Considering meteorological projections, the frequency and ma gnitude of hurricanes in the Caribbean appear more probable in the future. Correspondingly, this necessitates a more organized response to such threats of devastation. Additional hurricane relief operations increase resource consumption and reduce already scarce resources that are required for competing foreign and domestic policy objectives.
This study examines hurricane relief operations to determine if there is an appropriate role for the armed forces of the Caribbean in managing the response to hurricanes. The thesis examines the existing Caribbean agreement that established the Caribbean Disaster Response Agency (CDERA) and compares it to the United States of America Emergency Management Assistance Compact (EMAC). The thesis concludes that there is an appropriate role for the armed forces of the Caribbean in hurricane relief operations and recommends a new policy approach to achieve this objective.
